AMERICA AGAIN. LONDON, July 17.—In consequence of the rain the match for the American cup was postponed at Wimbledon until Wednesday next. The first contest to-day was for the St. Leger Sweepstakes at two hundred yards, and each competitor has seven shots. The possible score is thirty-five. There are several hundred competitors. Of the Americans, Fulton has already scored 35; Gildersleeve, 34; Yale, 33; Canfield, 31; and Dakin, 27. The shooting is still in progress, and if Fulton's score is equalled, the match will be shot off next week.

Late New York News.

NEW YORK, July 17.—A case has just been brought in the United States Court to settle the constitutionality of the new law doubling the postage on third class mail matter. The party instituting the proceedings holds that the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill, in which the clause increasing the postage was inserted, was not a bill for raising the revenue, and that the bill should have originated in the House, the Senate having no power to originate bills for that purpose. The great swimming contest, between J. B. Johnson and Thomas Coyle, for the championship of the world and $1,000 a side, to take place on the Delaware river on the 22d, creates interest here, and is already the subject of much comment.

That Whisky Ring.

Indictments by the St. Louis Grand Jury.—How Matters Were Conducted.—More of McGru's Story, and What a Distiller Has to Say. ST. LOUIS, July 17.—The United States Grand Jury have brought in the first fruits of their investigation into the workings of the Whisky Ring. They returned twenty indictments, and will go on with the investigation. The fact that true bills have been found falls like a bomb. The accused parties have actually persuaded their friends and the St. Louis public that the whole thing would blow over, and that McGru would never be heard from after the Grand Jury had done with it.

One-third of those twenty indictments are against Gen. John McDonald and Col. John A. Joyce, the Ex-Supervisor of Internal Revenue and Ex-Renture agent for this district, and the others against the distillers and dissemblers. None of the parties were under arrest when the returns were made, and hence capias were ordered for all of them. So far, Wm. McKee, of the Globe-Democrat, and Constantine McGru have not been indicted. Your correspondent was told last night that as far as the latter was concerned, it was probable that no prosecution would be undertaken, but that if anything was done, McGru would be sued on his bond.

With regard to McKee it is said the trouble is not yet begun. McGru is expected back here to complete his story, and there is another witness yet not produced, who is expected to give evidence of the most damaging character. McGru's story complete, will, it is said, show that he was brought here in 1871 by McKee, and that a ring was organized under the pretense of raising an election fund to carry the State for Gen. Grant. C. W. Ford, now deceased, was Collector then and was won over to the villainous scheme, my informant states, by the representation that McKee had the sanction of President Grant to the plan.

He finally acquiesced, but only with the understanding that the whole business should stop immediately after the election of 1872. McGru fixed up things with the distillers, Ulrich being the last to come into the ring, and the latter newly broke the whole transaction by his astonishment at finding Ford mixed up in the disreputable business. The latter had been the ideal representative of the United States Express Company, and was considered a model of integrity.

Before the ring was fairly in working order, Ulrich tried to break up the arrangement, but McGru had borrowed $50,000 and put it into the old Kern distillery, and was going to make a fortune. He threatened to blow the whole thing, so that it could be made an election document, if they backed out and the operation went on. Ulrich held out to the last, and claims that he went in finally, when McDonald, Joyce and others had pushed him so that it was either the ring or bankruptcy. He says they abused their official authority to stop his distillery, made unnecessary examinations of his books, and all sorts of things, until he was forced to join the band. McGru was the disorganizing agent, and he says that during this period and up to November, 1872, the weekly payments as he understood their disposition were like this: McKee, $1,000 and part of the time $1,300; Ford, $200; Joyce, $200; McDonald, $200; Avery, $100; McGru, $1,500.

The Catholic Clergy Speak Out. LAWRENCE, MASS., July 17.—The Roman Catholic clergy, of this city, publish the following: "We, the undersigned, Roman Catholic clergymen of Lawrence, desire publicly to make known our condemnation of the riotous proceedings of last Monday evening. We do not consider as Catholics, in the proper meaning of the word, those who participated in the disturbances of the public peace, and by their shameful conduct sullied the fair name of our city. We teach our people good will toward all people, and we strive by precept and example to impress upon them the importance of faithfully observing the laws. We trust that the few ruffians, who, under the name of Catholics, were in the Orange room, have created such bad feelings and given rise to so much trouble, may be made to feel the enormity of their crime."

The Connecticut Legislature. HARTFORD, CT., July 17.—The Legislature voted to adjourn next Friday. Among the important measures yesterday was one appropriating $1,000,000 to complete the State-house. Liberal but Singular. BOSTON, July 17.—By the will of the late James McQuestion, of Plymouth, the American Home Mission Society received a very large but very peculiar bequest. After a liberal provision for his family, the balance of the estate is committed to the care of three trustees, and their successors, to be appointed by the Probate Court, who are to manage his property until the sum at their disposal reaches $100,000; then $100,000 is to be invested in a business block in Boston, and the rents are to be paid to the Missionary Society. The $50,000 is to accumulate again until it amounts to $100,000, and so the process is to go on. Should the Society ever cease, the donations must to some other organization for some general purpose, or it may be applied to the aid of the poor in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts.

Last night young Storer took a pillow from his bunk and went into the main hold to get a cooler and more comfortable place to sleep. Some time after a severe storm came up, which caused the brig to roll and displaced the lumber, which fell on the sleeper, crushing his head and body, killing him instantly.

STATUE OF BYRON. A meeting was held yesterday, at which it was resolved to open a public subscription for the erection of a statue of Lord Byron in some conspicuous place in London. Disraeli presided and speeches in favor of the project were made by the Earl of Melbourne, Earl Stanhope and Mr. G. A. Sala. General Wilson stated, on behalf of the Americans, that they claimed a share in Byron and the right to contribute to the memorial. He was sure his countrymen would gladly furnish at least a quarter

The headquarters of General Jovellana are at Sarriena.

Canadian Crops. MONTREAL, July 17.—An elaborate statement is published, showing the present condition and prospects of the crops in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario. The frosty weather has inflicted considerable damage on winter wheat in some districts, and it is considerably below the average in both Provinces. Spring wheat will be an average crop. Coarse grains give evidence of satisfactory results in both Provinces. The yield will be doubtless below the average, but, upon the whole, a fair harvest may be counted upon, which will help to counterbalance the effect of existing business depression.

On the Rocks. MONTREAL, July 17.—A telegram from St. John's says the magnificent steamer Champlain, of the Champlain Transportation Company, ran upon the rocks at Saw-mill Point, two miles and a half north of Westport, and sank in seven minutes. It is supposed she broke in two. Not a life was lost. Eldridge, the oldest pilot on the lake, was steering at the time, but owing to the rain and intense darkness it is supposed the accident occurred from miscalculation.

There were thirty witnesses summoned, of whom only four were examined. The case will be protracted for several days. McCurdie, who was wounded by Trot at the same time, was unable to appear on the stand. Turner is still in a dangerous condition. George L. Converse appeared for the defense and Judge Rankin and E. Clay Briggs for the prosecution.

Yesterday the jewelry store of A. Newhall was robbed of eight valuable watches and $50 in money by a thief who entered while the attention of the proprietor and clerk was attracted by the Harmon street parade. The valuation of railroad property in this county is more than 50 per cent. higher than in 1872. Taylor & Bros. Wm. Martin was terribly crushed between two freight cars in the C., S. & C. yards last night.

LIEUTENANT SPAETH gently whispers in our ear, this afternoon, that there will be a coming at 8:30 o'clock this evening at the Ninth-street Station. The donors of the gift, which is to be a heavy gold-headed cane, are the patrolmen of that station, and the recipient is no less than the well-known late Captain, Jacob Johnson. The Lieutenant told us to keep "num," and we do; don't you see.

CAPTAIN JOHNSON, while going to dinner to-day, arrested James D. Flynn near 1281 Richmond street and lodged him at Ninth-street Station on a charge of assault and battery. Flynn is said to have hurled a brick at a Mrs. McCarthy and struck her on the head, causing a serious wound, from which the blood flowed freely. It seems to have been a free fight all around, as Mrs. McCarthy also threw some missile at Flynn.

Runaway on the Reading Road. A runaway that will probably be attended with fatal consequences happened this morning on the Reading road, near East Walnut Hills. The horse, attached to a buggy in which was seated Mrs. Isaac E. Brown, wife of the prominent front-street merchant, became frightened at one of the watering tubs situated on the side of the road and ran away with a furious speed. The cries of the unfortunate woman and the crowd of persons who attempted to stop the horse seemed only to accelerate his speed. At the junction of Montgomery and Reading roads the horse made a turn, and in doing so upset the buggy.

Mrs. Brown was dashed to the ground head foremost. When she was picked up blood was profusely oozing from a large wound on the side of her head. Her face was so bruised and scratched as to be almost unrecognizable. The unfortunate woman was taken to her home in an insensible condition, where medical aid was promptly administered and everything done that could alleviate her pain. The buggy was a total wreck, but the horse escaped with a few injuries.

AUDITOR HUMPHREYS. He Asks the Opinion of the Board of Trade Regarding the City Tax Levy.

At a meeting of the Board of Trade to-day Auditor Humphreys submitted the following for an expression of opinion in relation to the municipal tax ordinance: It is alleged that 16 mills are required for municipal purposes independent of the levy required to pay accruing interest on the Southern railroad bonds.

That the levy of 4 mills to meet said interest is for a special purpose authorized by an act of the Railroad law, that the ten millions of indebtedness authorized said road having been sanctioned by the people, it is a legitimate liability, and the interests on the bonds representing the same must be met promptly. That our public credit is involved in this matter, and any technical objection should be received in consideration of the importance of preserving our public credit inviolate, that the legitimate "construction of limitations" of our municipal tax levies, as given in Vol. 66, O. L., page 258, section 242, does not warrant the refusal to accept 4 mills for interest on Southern Railroad bonds in addition to 16 mills for all purposes.

On the other hand it is alleged that the County Auditor has no right to place upon the tax duplicate any ordinance levy from our City Council which calls for more than 16 mills for all purposes, and that the four mills to meet interest on the bonds should be a component of the 16 mills and can not be legitimately considered as any other than a municipal levy, and as such must come within the 16 mills limitation.

As commercial interests are involved in maintenance of our public credit, it is claimed they are also involved in prohibiting excessive or unnecessary rates of taxation, and that the Auditor is under obligation to insist upon respect being paid to the statute limitations. It is a question for grave consideration what decision the Auditor should make under the conflicting interests and opinions bearing upon the case, as whether he should place upon the tax duplicate a copy of the municipal ordinance levy which does not especially state the per cent. of each component part of said levy, thus depriving him of means of knowing whether the law is complied with in the apportionment of the various levies authorized by it.

Yours respectfully, Jos. B. HUMPHREYS, On motion the matter was referred to the Committee on taxation, and a special committee consisting of Messrs. D. W. Wain, F. E. Tait and T. B. Paxton.

A Lively Tussle in a Photograph Gallery between Two Officers and Two Thieves. Lieutenant Birnbaum, of the Cumminsville Station, and Officer Logan this morning escorted two notorious New York thieves, George Brown and John R. Woods, to Weinigartner's photograph gallery on Sixth and Central avenue to have their pictures taken. They were arrested yesterday evening and lodged in the Ninth-street Station. The prisoners on entering the gallery showed fight and Brown attacked Lieutenant Birnbaum and severely injured his hand. Brown could only overcome by force and Birnbaum did not hold back in dealing his ugly customer some severe blows and ended the affray by knocking him to the floor. Officer Logan was also set upon by Woods, but by quick and adroit management he soon quelled him effectually, and by putting him in irons prevented further trouble.

The two officers then forced Brown to remain quiet till his photograph was taken. The same thing was done with Woods, who relinquished himself to his fate. The two men are dangerous characters, and had they not been taken, some of our citizens would soon have fallen victims to their games. They are both men of great muscle, and it would be dangerous to have an encounter with them. Had it not been for the lightning agility of the two officers, Brown and Woods would have made good their escape to-day. The pictures were taken to Colonel Snellbaker's office, and now adorn the "Rogues' Gallery."

Death at the Work-house. E. H. Burton, sentenced to the Work-house on July 15 for abusing his family, died at that institution about two o'clock this morning of intemperance. The deceased was a man about thirty-two years of age, and previous to his incarceration resided on Freeman street, near Clark. He leaves a wife and two children. He was sentenced to thirty days and $50 and at the time was heavily under the influence of liquor.

Last night he was locked up in a cell where he raved like a maniac, and soon after was afflicted with delirium tremens in which state he remained until his death. Coroner Maley was notified and held an inquest this morning. The jury returned a verdict of death from intemperance.

What Newton Says About It. A representative of the Review had an interview last night with Frank Newton, as he was en route to Narragansett.

"What do you think about the result?" quoth the journalist. "I think this," he said, "that there's a pretty square issue between Henry Ward Beecher and myself. One or the other is a perjurer, and ought to be in a perjurer's cell in the State Prison."

"That's a question you think indiscreetly decided by the late disagreement?" queried the interviewer. "It is a question intended to have decided before I die," replied Newton, with a dark frown. "I have been to the District Attorney's office to challenge an indictment, and I am afraid, without any prospect of it. Last night Beecher stood in the only pulpit he can occupy in America. He will stand in it again to-morrow. But, if I live and he lives another year, one of us will be a convicted perjurer and occupy a perjurer's cell. Tilton's struggle with Beecher was his own—not mine. He had to contend with great obstacles. He had condoned his wife's fault, and in this world such magnanimity is shameful. The consequence was that all his witnesses suffered. But this is now my battle, and I mean to fight it to the end, again that either Beecher or I will fill a perjurer's cell before this is finished. The Sight of One Eye Improved by the Cutting Out of the Other. Aaron Shute, of Brooklyn, who was thought to have been fatally shot by a burglar nearly a month ago, is recovering. One of the bullets entered three inches under the left ear, another on the right-side of the neck, and a third close to the lobe of the left ear. Soon after the burglar escaped from the home Mr. Shute vomited large quantities of blood, and the physicians pronounced the case fatal and refused to do anything. But through Mrs. Shute's entreaties one of them gave her husband a dose of ice water and the bleeding was stopped. The wounds were not dressed until seven the next evening, the physicians declining to give useless pain to, as they thought, a dying man.

On Saturday Mr. Shute's right eye was taken out. Exactly in the center of the eye-ball was a small bullet. The bullet that entered under the left ear broke off and carried before it a splinter from the spine column about the size of a pea. This bone was afterward found by the side of the bed. The second bullet, which grazed the lobe of the left ear, went obliquely under the left eye and lodged behind the pupil of the right eye.

Since the removal of his right eye Mr. Shute has almost recovered his health, and has been able to see much better with his left eye, which had long been near-sighted.

The experiment of destroying the body of a dead horse by cremation has been made in Milan in the presence of several doctors and scientists. The carcass was placed in a huge oven, through the lateral openings of which four hundred jets of lighter gas were directed upon it, and large jets of gas and air applied to the three most difficult points of combustion. The operation lasted a little over two hours. There was no residue from the combustion, and it was maintained by bad odors.

The population of rivers in England by the manufacturers along their banks, has become a serious matter. Chemical works and dyehouses are the worst poisoners of the water. A man who fell into the river at Bradford, died from swallowing some of the liquid. The Clyde is described as emitting malarious effluvia, the Mersey as almost unbearable in the stench, and the Bourne as black and yellow. The few fish that live in these streams are unfit for food. English sanitarians are trying to devise some plan for rendering sewerage and refuse innocuous.
